MODERN LANGUAGES AND CULTURE

BACHELOR'S DEGREE

The Course aims to equip graduates with an intercultural education in response to the needs of contemporary, social and professional society, with particular attention to relations between Europe and the rest of the world.

The three study plans allow students to build their own customised study plan by taking exams of the three-year course in the linguistic-cultural areas that interest them the most: the degree course offers three-year or two-year programmes in French, English, Portuguese, Spanish, German, Arabic, Chinese and Russian (the courses include literature exams and philology exams). Students can then expand their competences with general and Italian linguistics, contemporary history, digital humanities, economics and law.

All courses offer materials for distance learning on the teaching platform UniTusMoodle, which allows students to interact with the teachers via the Internet and access exercises and other teaching tools designed for individual study.

Our students are given the opportunity of a Double Degree programme with a French university.

Before students can sit the exams in Language and Translation and Language and Literature, target language exams are given by Language Assistants (CEL), in cooperation with the Languages Unit of the University.

The language exams assess students' linguistic competence according to the parameters of the Common European Framework of Reference (CEFR). Each student has a personal record of their linguistic development (Language Passport) in which, for each academic year, the level reached for each target language is recorded. Subsequent to the successful outcome of the language exams, the course tutor assesses students with written and oral examinations to ascertain their expertise in the various specific subjects.
